LANTIC SEACOST TODAY.
—ALL SAILINGS CAN-

S. O. S. Calls Sent Out by Other
Stricken Vessels This Afternoon.
Two German U-boats Sighted
Thus Far—Their Base
Not Known.

Germany has brought its war directly to the gates of the United States and its submarines are now dealing death and devastation all along the Atlantic shipping coast.

All the important ports of sailing have been ordered closed and while the reported toll of vessels sunk has reached nineteen, the authorities at Washington intimate that this is higher than the actual loss.

The first loss reported was that of the Edward Cole, which was blown up after surrendering and the last was a wireless from the passenger steamship Carolina asking for aid. This vessel had two hundred and twenty passengers on board.

A report that one submarine had been captured has not been affirmed or denied. The majority of the vessels lost have been sailing boats although some steamers are reported lost.

The Navy Department announces they have sufficient vessels ready for service to cope with the situation and much secrecy is maintained in Washington.

Official Reports.
Washington, June 3.—Beside the Edward H. Cole the names of two other sunk ships have been reported to the navy. They are the schooner Jacob Haskell and the Isabella Willey. A navy department statement announcing the sinking says the navy department has been informed that three American schooners have been sunk off this coast by enemy submarines.

Sunk Sunday.
"The steamship Bristol, arriving at New York this morning, reported the four-masted schooner Edward H. Cole was sunk by a submarine at 6:30 p. m. Sunday. The ship was bound for New York and the Bristol rescued the crew and brought them to port."

"It also rescued the crew of another sailing vessel which was sunk. The Bristol reported she encountered a submarine thirty-eight miles off Bar Harbor at 4:30 p. m. Sunday, and two submarines were operating in that locality. The steamship Jacob Haskell was sunk by a German submarine in the same vicinity at noon on Sunday. The crew was rescued. It also reported the Isabella D. Willey was sunk by a submarine."

Sunk by Bombs.
Captain Newcomb of the Cole stated that his vessel was attacked by a German submarine, which boarded his boat, took away his papers and placed bombs on board. The captain and crew took to the water. The captain and crew took to the water. The captain and crew took to the water."

Are on Watch.
Barnegat, June 3.—Watch has been passed along the Atlantic coast to be on watch for crews of ships sunk by submarines. All of the government life guard stations have been communicated with but up to five o'clock no disaster had been reported. At this station nothing has been heard of any reported sinking of ships by enemy submarines.

Philadelphia Closed.
Philadelphia, June 3.—Orders were issued here at 10:00 a. m. today to prevent any vessel from leaving the port of Philadelphia. This condition is effective until further notice.

Norfolk Closed.
Norfolk, Va., June 3.—The port of Norfolk was closed today to all outgoing vessels. Rumors were current that a U-boat was sighted off the cape today.

Havana Closed.
An Atlantic port, June 3.—Passengers on incoming steamships from Cuba said that the Cuban government, probably in fear of submarines, had kept the port of Havana closed to all outgoing vessels, from May 20 to 26.

Many Sunk.
New York, June 3.—Information received at the Maritime Exchange here indicated "as many as fifteen vessels have been sunk within the last week. A South American ship arriving here brought a report of the presence of two German submarines in the vicinity of Bermuda. The report that fifteen vessels have been sunk seems to indicate the presence of an number of submarines and the enemy has inaugurated an attack in force."

Although there have been rumors of submarines having crossed the Atlantic since America entered the war, none has before attacked American shipping on this side of the American coast. On October 19, the German submarine U-53 after visiting Newport, R. I., lay in wait for British shipping off Nantucket and got six victims.

Two more American vessels, the Hattie Dunn and the Samuel W. S. Hathaway, have been sunk by German submarines. Details of the additional sinking have not been received. The Hattie Dunn, a three-masted schooner, was a feet long, thirty-five feet beam and eleven feet deep. Her tonnage was 3765. She was built at Hingham, Maine, in 1884. The Samuel Hathaway, a four-masted schooner, was built at Brewster, Mass., in 1902.

Early Warning.
There have been reports for some time that the German navy was planning to make a surprise attack on the shipping on this side of the Atlantic. The first intimation of this decision came in an address delivered in Paris by Georges Leygues, French minister of marine, on May 12. M. Leygues in a review of the submarine situation stated the Germans have constructed a type of submarine, never before known, capable of carrying and allied transports. Later in May it was reported in a British admiralty statement a German submarine had been sunk by a British submarine. The British statement stated the German submarine was in the southwest point of Portugal. Then came in rapid succession reports of submarines operating in the waters around the Cape of Good Hope. The captain of a steamship landing in Norfolk reports having sighted a German submarine somewhere off a Carolina cape.

Later it was explained by Washington this boat might have been an American submarine on its way to Europe.

Report Capture.
New York, June 3.—Rumor has reached the office of the third naval district here that a submarine operating off the coast has been captured. A U. S. U-boat was towed to this port. There is no confirmation of this rumor as yet.

Was It Captured?
Boston, June 3.—Many reports received here today were one that a German submarine, after sinking four vessels, was captured and is being taken into New York. The reports denied any definite knowledge of the matter.

COAL WEEK ENCOURAGES EARLY ORDERS OF FUEL

[BY INTERNATIONAL NEWS]
Washington, June 3.—Tomorrow marks the beginning of "Coal Week," designated by the fuel administration to encourage early ordering of coal. With the bulk of the year's supply of coal ordered in advance, the fuel administration has stated, the various distributing agencies of the government will be better able to effect an equitable distribution of fuel between different sections of the country. Production is steadily increasing, it is stated, but it must be further increased if a shortage of fuel next winter is to be avoided.

Already in many communities one-third of the normal coal orders have been placed by both industrial and domestic consumers. Judge J. M. Becker Taken In Custody By U. S. Authorities

County Judge of Green County Taken to Madison by United States Marshals This Morning.
Monroe, June 3.—Deputy United States Marshal Fred Teuton, of Madison, arrived in Monroe Sunday evening with a warrant for the arrest of Judge John J. Becker for many years judge of the Green County probate court, charging him with "espionage."

The warrant was the result of the federal grand jury investigation held at Superior at which time many other warrants on similar charges were issued. Marshal Teuton came down from Madison Sunday evening and went to the Becker home where they later read the warrant to the prisoner. It was first intended to take Becker to Madison by auto, in the judge's own car, but it was later thought unwise and the party left the city this morning at eight-forty over the Illinois Central railroad. The exact nature of the charges has not been made public.

Judge Becker some time ago announced his candidacy for the nomination for governor on the Republican ticket, stating that he would take the attitude of United States Senator Robert M. La Follette as his platform without any change or making a new deal in his formal statements.

Judge Becker was several years ago an aspirant for judge of the circuit court at the time when Judge Madison was first elected. He has also been prominent in democratic circles and later an avowed supporter of La Follette.

INSPIRING SERMON DELIVERED BY REV. CUMMINGS YESTERDAY

Beautiful and Strong Sermon on Christ's Love Preached at Methodist Church by Rev. Clark.

"Christ as Prophet, Priest and King" was the subject chosen by Rev. Clark W. Cummings for a very inspiring sermon, delivered by him at the morning services at the Methodist church. "No topic could be more absorbing," he said, "none more vital at this time. Christ towers over all others, and occupies a place in the world, he should have given to him the first place in every life and heart. If any one is giving any other the first place in the throne room of his heart, he is not true to him."

"These teachers of the ages, like Buddha and others, may be great prophets, but they are not great priests. He is so far above and beyond these others that there is no comparison. As Christ occupies this unique place in the world, he should have given to him the first place in every life and heart. If any one is giving any other the first place in the throne room of his heart, he is not true to him."

The first way that Jesus ministered to mankind was defined by the speaker as being that of a prophet, or as God's messenger on earth. "Many others have said, 'I have come with burning words of prophecy to the people of the earth,' but Christ stands alone as the greatest prophet of Christ ever lived. His mission was not only to foretell things which were to happen, but also to serve pre-eminently as a speaker for God. The lines of his work were not in the realm of the future, but in the realm of the present. His mission was to show the world the way to God. He spoke when he said, 'I have come to show the world the way to God. He cared not for himself, but only that the world should see and know God in all his love.'

"All hearts yearned to know the final word of God in this message of Christ. He has the flower of all the ages complete and final."

A beautiful description of the Mount of Transfiguration was given, wherein was depicted the scene of a meeting with Moses and Elijah. One of these great lawgivers of the world, on whose precepts much of modern law is founded, whose teachings had served as inspiration to the people of his time. "Jesus stood in the midst," it was said, "greater by than either. Jesus at that time on Mount Transfiguration was 'Hear Ye Him.'"

The speaker emphasized the fact that "the law of Christ was the law that was to govern the world. It was a law of love, which should be the basis of all human conduct. No man or group of men can dictate to the conscience of mankind. Thus, Jesus said, 'I am the way, the truth, and the life. He who is ready to intercede for us before the throne of the Almighty. He is our advocate, pleading our cause at the side of our Father. Our conditional salvation, but one full and free. We should be encouraged by the feeling that Jesus is ever at the throne making intercession for us."

Jesus was also king of kings and lord of lords. It was likewise a statement strongly emphasized by the speaker. "He has all authority and all power."

"We are living in the greatest age of history, when the kings of the world are rapidly losing their power," was another truth illustrated by several royal examples.

"The world is taking now of the stage the nations of democracy come to the front," it was said, "and the earthly kings move out of the arena, making way for the king of men, who is Jesus Christ."

"The world is taking now of the stage the nations of democracy come to the front," it was said, "and the earthly kings move out of the arena, making way for the king of men, who is Jesus Christ."

The speaker closed with an eloquent plea for greater service for Christ. He said: "Christ speak to you of things to come as a prophet, ask him to stand in God's presence and intercede for you as a pleading angel. He is the king of kings, and he will grant great things when you enter into the reward of the just."

The exchange of pulpits on yesterday was made in a friendly spirit of co-operation. Rev. P. P. Lewis speaking at the Christian Church. The music of yesterday was fitting and pleasing. Miss Sewell, director of the choir, and sang the solo in the anthem, "The Lost Sheep," by Jordan. The other anthem was "There's a Friend in the Home Land."

In the evening a musical service was held at the Congregational Church, participated in by members from the Congregational, Baptist, Methodist and Presbyterian churches. And this will be followed by a series of Sunday evening services for the summer months. Rev. R. G. Peterson preached the sermon last evening. His text was taken from Matthew 23rd chapter 13rd verse: "Woe unto you, Pharisees and lawyers, for ye have piled up the words of the law, but have neglected the weightier matters of the law. The subject took up the pressing affairs of the times, and the fact that so many vital things, and have pushed aside and side-tracked that unimportant trifles be given the right of way. The thought was emphasized that the business of the day was to do those things most

COMPANY G'S DRILL YESTERDAY PROVED HIGHLY PROFITABLE

March to Old Chautauqua Grounds With Dinner and Field Maneuvers

Most Profitable to Forty-five Members Who Took Part.

(By Private A. Roopy.)
Stunned faces and necks, stiff joints and aching limbs today remained as but a few of the memories of the march and drill yesterday taken by forty-five members of Company G, Eighth Regiment, Wisconsin State Guard. The old Chautauqua grounds were the scene of the hike, and the start was made from the armory at ten-twenty in the morning. A piping hot dinner was served at one o'clock, and guard mounting, loading and firing stacking arms and target practice were among the maneuvers executed in the afternoon. The return march to the armory began shortly after sundown and it was only a few minutes before five when the order to fall out was given in the armory.

With Captain Atwood and Lieutenants Baumann and Gage in charge, the company, carrying guns, left the armory at ten-twenty and proceeded in a column of squad to the Chautauqua grounds. The company then proceeded on its way to the chautauqua grounds.

At half past eight the entrance to the grounds because of heavy rain was closed. The company was waiting for a volunteer wire cutting squad to prepare the way, the members of the company witnessed a demonstration in the use of the hand gun, given by Privates Dougherty and McDowell.

Private Dougherty fully succeeded in showing his younger comrades that it was no easy job to hurl a grenade more than a few feet. The winner of the contest.

The company then proceeded by single file down the valley, through several barbed wire fences, and through the stone culvert, to a spot one hundred and fifty yards from the river. Here a rest was ordered which was welcomed by every member of the company. The company then proceeded to the river bank, where a picnic was held. COMPANY G'S DRILL YESTERDAY PROVED HIGHLY PROFITABLE

March to Old Chautauqua Grounds With Dinner and Field Maneuvers

Most Profitable to Forty-five Members Who Took Part.

(By Private A. Roopy.)
Stunned faces and necks, stiff joints and aching limbs today remained as but a few of the memories of the march and drill yesterday taken by forty-five members of Company G, Eighth Regiment, Wisconsin State Guard. The old Chautauqua grounds were the scene of the hike, and the start was made from the armory at ten-twenty in the morning. A piping hot dinner was served at one o'clock, and guard mounting, loading and firing stacking arms and target practice were among the maneuvers executed in the afternoon. The return march to the armory began shortly after sundown and it was only a few minutes before five when the order to fall out was given in the armory.

The time has come when it is necessary to obtain a correct list of the boys who are in the service, both army and navy, from this city and Rock county. To do this means considerable work, but it is necessary and The Gazette is going to do it.

Last Christmas the County Council of Defense had occasion to send packages to the boys from this city who joined the colors and it was difficult to secure the addresses of a good many. There is no complete list and there are boys from Rock county represented in nearly every branch of the service.

MORRIS MILLER

Sam Langford is through. For the second time within the last two months the Boston Tar Baby has been knocked out by the same hand, namely, Harry Willis. The recent knockout came down at Panama where a bevy of colored boxers seem to have congregated. It was to have been a twenty-round bout, but Willis punished Langford so savagely that his seconds threw in the sponge in the seventh round.

A five ringman with an almighty powerful punch, Langford was about the last of the great black boxers—the last of the long list that included Peter Jackson, Jack Johnson, Young Peter Jackson, Joe Gans, Bobby Dobbs, Joe Walcott, George Dixon, George Godfrey, Dixie Kid and many others.

Harry Willis is a good man, but he never had the opportunity to develop—or rather to market—his abilities. When he was just a novice he was bothering Langford a lot and it is no cinch that he could not beat the champion. The Dempsey and the Williams of today. Sam McVey was a pretty good man. So was Joe Jeane. But with the possible exception of Willis there does not appear to be any real colored boxer of the old type left.

Nobody ever knew Langford's real age. Langford says he is thirty-two, but Tom Andrews' record book shows him to be thirty-four. Langford is five feet seven inches tall, but despite his lack of inches he was able to bowl over the biggest of fighters and the most terrific of brawlers. He was the marvel of his time, this Langford.

Members of the Greenville, S. C., draft board, at the University of Chicago, have given brief burials to the National League. The draft board has given full consideration and that it was decided his wife is not dependent on him for support. The player's entrance into the army in a shipyard will not keep him out of the army if the draft board has its way and notice has been sent him to report immediately. The draft board will take steps to compel Jackson to report as it has ordered him to do.

The alleged intentions of the Chicago Cubs to have Grover Alexander given brief burials so he can pitch games for his old teammates in the National League is not likely, reports received from Camp Junction. The athletic directors of the camp have arranged for a number of ball games in Lincoln and other places for the benefit of the boys in this camp and in each case it is guaranteed that Alexander will pitch. These games probably will take all of the big pitcher's spare time.

The New York Yankees have announced the purchase of Pitcher Hugh Bennett from the Toledo club of the American Association. Bennett, who formerly pitched for the Boston Red Sox, was a holdout and refused to report to the Ohio team this spring.

That hardy old veteran, Bill Clement, manager of the Louisville Colonels, who caused the baseball world to utter last fall when he offered to play the world's series with the Yankees, is out again. Bill looked over several major league teams in Chicago during a recent visit and announced that the Colonels can beat anything in the big show.

What's bothering us is what will become of all the "hot" and "hot dog" vendors if the government closes the baseball parks.

When Roger Hornsby was out of the St. Louis Cardinals' lineup, Bobby Waller stepped in and performed like a champion. They never made 'em any better than Bobby when the old boy was in his prime.

UNFORTUNATE.

It is unfortunate that with the realization of the years, a bigger, better, and more prosperous Janesville with a larger population and increased factories almost assured, that certain citizens should see fit to practically annul the efforts of the men seeking to accomplish wonders.

True, it is human nature, but still the individual should sink his own views when a question of civic welfare is being considered. However, cupidly always creeps in when least expected and if that is the case, it is a business that will not last a few years gives promise of making the city one of the most prominent in the middle west fall we have only our own individual citizens to thank.

The blame can not be laid upon the men who have been untiring in their efforts to create a bigger Janesville. Their gain would be small compared with the material gain to every resident, business man, property owner, and worker in the city. They have done everything possible and are continuing their efforts in the hope of surrounding obstacles that have arisen.

If they are successful the future of Janesville is assured. Not dependent upon the continuation of the war and the manufacture of war munitions, but even greater in peace than war and yet absolutely essential in both. Let us hope that certain individuals will act with wisdom and discretion and aid in this great work that is being contemplated.

THE BATTLE OF PARIS.

Readily the name for the new battle being waged on the water might well be called the battle of Paris, as the second battle of the Marne. That Paris is the objective of the Hun advance, Paris and the channel ports alike, is most certain, but their losses have been so tremendous that experts believe they must stop soon to recuperate and the U. S. army. If they do this will give the United States an opportunity to hurry the training of more of its forces and send more regiments and divisions that are ready across the water. We had the preliminary training for this war departure in 1917, but the present year from the present outlook would indicate that would surpass even the conception of these war planners.

PEOPLE ARE WARNED NOT TO TRAP OR TO SHOOT U. S. PIGEONS

War Department Advises People to Refrain From Interfering With Training of Thousands of Carrier Pigeons.

Shooting and trapping of pigeons owned by the United States or bearing a band owned and issued by the United States is absolutely forbidden and citizens are warned of the penalty attached to the offense—$100 fine or imprisonment for six months, or both. The order as issued by the Department of War follows:

War Department, May 23.—From department signal officer. To gun clubs in central department. Subject: Shooting and trapping of pigeons.

1. Owing to the great need of homing or carrier pigeons in the conduct of the war, the pigeon department of the Signal Corps has been expanded to large proportions. Throughout the United States the training of these pigeons is in progress on an extensive scale.

2. Considerable interference has been met with in this work on account of the shooting of pigeons being trained for service. Many persons have thus impaired the service of homing pigeons, being innocent of the fact that these were birds being trained for the army.

3. A law recently passed by congress making it unlawful to "knowingly entrap, capture, shoot, kill, possess or in any way detain an Antwerp or homing pigeon, commonly called carrier pigeon, which is owned by the United States or bears a band owned and issued by the United States having thereon the letters 'U. S. A.' or 'U. S. N.' and a serial number."

4. It is intensely unpatriotic to shoot or interfere with pigeons of any kind, inasmuch as the person indulging in this pastime has no means of differentiating between the ordinary pigeon and the homing or carrier pigeon.

5. Your co-operation is earnestly desired in the carrying out of these regulations. It is requested that your members be instructed that this important war work in the training of pigeons be thereby assisted by a continuation of your patriotic help.

6. A copy of the law covering such violation is attached.

An act to prevent interference with the use of homing pigeons by the United States, to provide a penalty for such interference, and for other purposes.

Be it enacted by the senate and house of representatives of the United States of America in congress assembled, that it be, and it hereby is, declared to be unlawful to knowingly entrap, capture, shoot, kill, possess, or in any way detain an Antwerp, or homing pigeon, commonly called carrier pigeon, which is owned by the United States or bears a band owned and issued by the United States having thereon the letters "U. S. A." or "U. S. N." and a serial number.

Sec. 2.—That the possession or detention of any pigeon described in section one of this Act by any person or persons in any loft, house, cage, building, or structure in the ownership or under the control of such person or persons without giving immediate notice by registered mail to the nearest military or naval authorities, shall be prima facie evidence of a violation of this act.

Sec. 3.—That any person violating the provisions of this Act shall, upon conviction, be punished by a fine of not more than $100, or by imprisonment for not more than six months, or by both such fine and imprisonment.

Approved, April 19, 1918. Do Not Shoot at Pigeons.

The committee on public information issues the following:

Numerous complaints have been made to the pigeon section of the signal corps that carrier pigeons of the Signal Corps are being shot at and trapped.

The signal corps is very anxious to protect its pigeons from such treatment.

It is requested that you advise your members of this fact and urge them to refrain from such actions.

rier and homing pigeons are playing in the war, and the great need for their breeding and development in this country, the war department has considerably expanded the pigeon section of the signal corps. Homing pigeons constitute one of the most effective means of communication in the army, and are especially valuable as a sure method of replacing other means of communication. The breeding and training of pigeons, therefore, is of paramount necessity as a war measure.

FLIES FOR JAPAN

Tetsakichi Isobe.

Tetsakichi Isobe, a retired lieutenant, commander of the Japanese navy, is one of the most famed of Japanese aviators. He served for some time in the French army during the present war as an aviator in the French foreign legion. It was while serving here that he was decorated for bravery by the French government.

Any pigeon in the air may be a carrier pigeon flying from a loft under government supervision. Its destruction may be a serious loss to the American army. All persons, therefore, are urged to refrain from the shooting of pigeons and to discourage the practice of hunters and children.

JANESVILLE WILL SEE ECLIPSE OF SUN ON SATURDAY

Queer Phenomenon of Nature Can Be Seen by People of Middle West
Late Saturday Afternoon.

Saturday afternoon will be the occasion of a rare astronomical spectacle for the United States—the advent of a total eclipse of the sun—a phenomenon which affords unusual opportunity for observation and which is so widespread in its effects that the entire nation will note it.

An eclipse such as this will only become visible to the people of this country once in a lifetime. In fact, only for those people of Janesville interested in the study of the heavens, the total eclipse will not be seen from here. The appearance of the eclipse here will only be partial—75 per cent at its maximum—at exactly 4:24 Saturday afternoon.

This is explained by the Rev. John Kratner, professor of astronomy at Marquette university, who says that the total eclipse starting from the state of Washington follows a slightly curved course until it reaches the extreme east coast of the Florida peninsula. Janesville lies a considerable distance from its direct path. So the city will thus escape the rather weird, unearthly conditions which accompany the total eclipse.

At 4:22, the partial eclipse will begin to manifest itself by the gradual approach of darkness in the natural way. Which the eclipse will be seen from here. The appearance of the eclipse here will only be partial—75 per cent at its maximum—at exactly 4:24 Saturday afternoon.

phenomenon is very simple. The moon comes directly between the earth and sun although greatly smaller in size, the moon succeeds in entirely obstructing the sun from view. The moon's great distance from the earth accounts for this. The sun's eclipse is explained along these lines. The scientific event, although of singular importance comes at an inopportune time for study. Just previous to the last eclipse scientists hailing from all nations flocked to South America to observe the strange phenomena.

This year the war directly affects study of the spectacle as it has affected many other activities. No expensive expeditions to this country will be fitted out because of uncertainty and danger of ocean travel. Scientists here thus have an advantage over astronomers of Europe.

Perhaps for the first time in history the eclipse will become the subject of a special camera man. Congress has appropriated $2,500 for the erection of a special observatory at Baker, Ore., to make possible this rather unique phase of motion picture photography.

CHAPTER I.
The Nelsons' Harvest.
Once upon a time I owned a water-melon. I say once because I never did it again. When I got through owning that melon I raised another. The time was 1831; I was a boy of seven and the melon was the first of all my harvests. Every night and morning I watered and felt and surveyed my watermelon. My melon grew with the melon and, by and by, my uncle tried to express the extent and nature of my riches by calling me a millionaire.

I didn't know much about myself those days except the fact that my name was Bart Baynes and, further, that I was an orphan who owned a watermelon and a little spotted hen and lived on Rutherford in a neighborhood called Lickitspitt. I lived with my Aunt Deel and my Uncle Peabody Baynes on a farm. They were brothers—eight and she a little beyond the far-distant goal of forty.

My father and mother died in a scourge of diphtheria that swept the neighborhood when I was a boy of five. For a time my Aunt Deel seemed to blame me for my loss.

"No wonder they're dead," she used to say, when out of patients with me and—well, I suppose that I must have had an unusual talent for all the noisy arts of childhood when I broke the silence of that little home.

The word "dead" set the old millstone in the long stretch of my memory. That was because I tried so hard to comprehend it and further because it kept repeating its challenge to my imagination.

I often wondered just what had become of my father and mother and I remember that the day after I went to my aunt's home a great idea came to me. It came out of the old dinner-horn hanging in the shed. I knew the power of its summons and I sickly captured the horn and marched it around the house blowing it and hoping that it would bring my father up from the fields. I blew and blew and listened for that familiar halloo of his. When I paused for a drink of water at the well my aunt came and seized the horn and said it was no wonder they were dead. She knew nothing of the sublime bit of neuro-mimicry she had interrupted—poor soul!

I knew that she had spoken of my parents for I supposed that they were dead, but I did not know what it meant to be dead. I often called to them, as I had been wont to do, especially in the night, and shed many tears because they came no more to answer me. Aunt Deel would not refer directly to my talents, but I saw, many times, that no-wonder they shed tears in her face.

Children are great rememberers. They are the recording angels of the keepers of the book of life. Man forgets—how easily!—and easiest of all, the solemn truth that children do not forget.

A few days after I arrived in the home of my aunt and uncle I shyly entered the parlor and climbed the what-not to examine some white flowers on its top shelf and, dipping my nose into the bouquet, I was startled by the burden of albums, wax flowers and sea shells on the floor. My aunt came running on her tip-toes and exclaimed: "Merrill, come right out of here this minute—you peep!"

I took some rather long steps going out which were due to the fact that Aunt Deel was full of my aunt. While I sat weeping she went back to the parlor and began to pick up things.

"My weath, my weath!" I heard her moaning.

I now well remember that little assemblage of flower-ghosts in wax! They had no more right to associate with human beings than the ghosts of fable. Uncle Peabody, however, because they were a present from his Aunt Minerva. When Aunt Deel returned to the kitchen where I sat—a sorrowful little fellow—she said to tell your Uncle Peabody—ayes!

"Oh please don't tell my Uncle Peabody," I wailed.

"Ayes! I'll have to tell him," she answered finally.

For the first time I looked for him with dread at the window and when he came I hid in a closet and heard that solemn and penetrating note in her voice as she said:

"I guess you'll have to take that boy away—ayes!"

"What now?" he asked.

"His sister's come to the parlor and tipped over the what-not and smashed that beautiful wax weath!"

Her voice trembled.

"Not them! Minerva flowers!" he asked in a doleful incredulity.

"Ayes he did!"

"And tipped over the hull what-not?"

"Ayes!"

"Jesuusalem four-corners!" he exclaimed. "I'll have to—"

He stopped as he was wont to do on the threshold of strong opinions and momentous resolutions.

The rest of the conversation was drowned in my own cries and Uncle Peabody came and lifted me tenderly and carried the up-stairs.

He sat down with me on his lap and hugged my cries. Then he said very gently:

"Now, Bub, you and me have got to be careful. What-nots and albums and wax flowers and hair-cloth sofas are the most dangerous critters in St. Lawrence County. They're purty savage. Keep your eye peeled. You can't tell what minute they'll jump on ye. More boys have been dragged away and tore to pieces by 'em than by all the bears and panthers in the woods."

protest, to go to meeting. "Ayes! you've got 'em on ag'in," said Aunt Deel. "I suppose your black rousers ain't good 'nough. That's 'cause you know Edna Perry is goin' to be there—ayes!"

Edna Perry was a widow of about his age who was visiting her sister in the neighborhood.

Aunt Deel wouldn't go to church with us, so we went off together and walked home with Mrs. Perry. As we passed our house I saw Aunt Deel looking out of the window and waved my hand to her.

When we got home at last we found my aunt sitting in her arm-chair by the stove.

"You did it—didn't ye?—ayes," she demanded rather angrily as we came in.

"Done what?" asked Uncle Peabody.

"Shinin' up to that Perry woman—ain't ye?"—ayes! "I see you're bound to get married—ayes!"

I had no idea what it meant to get married but I made up my mind that it was something pretty low and bad. The moment I blamed Uncle Peabody.

Aunt Deel's voice and manner seemed to indicate that she had borne with him to the limit of her patience.

"Well," said my uncle, "I wouldn't be so—"

Again he checked himself for fear of going too far, I suppose.

"My heart's my heart," Aunt Deel exclaimed and struggled to her feet sobbing, and Uncle Peabody helped her to the lounge. She was so ill the rest of the day that my uncle had to go for the doctor while I bathed her forehead with cold water.

Poor Uncle Peabody! Every step toward matrimony required such an outlay of emotion and such a sacrifice of comfort that I presume it seemed to be hardly worth while.

Yet I must be careful not to give the reader a false impression of my Aunt Deel. She was a thin, pale woman, rather tall, with brown hair and blue eyes and a tongue—well, her tongue has spoken for itself. I suppose that she will seem inhumanly selfish with this jealousy of her brother.

I promised her that I would look after you and I'm agoin' to do it—ayes!" I used to hear her say to my uncle.

There were not many married men who were so thoroughly looked after. This was due in part to her high opinion of the Baynes family, and to a general distrust of women. In her view they were a designing lot. It was probably true that Mrs. Perry was fond of show and would have been glad to join the Baynes family, but those little things should have been set down against her. There was Aunt Deel's mistake. She couldn't allow any humanity in other women.

She toiled incessantly. She washed and scrubbed and polished and dusted and sewed and knit from morning until night. She lived in mortal fear that company would come and find her unprepared. Anna Jones or Jabez Lincoln and his wife or Ben and Mary Humphries, or Mr. and Mrs. Horace Dunkelberg. Those were the people of whom she talked when the neighbors came in and when she was talking of the Bayneses. I observed that she always said "Mr. and Mrs. Horace Dunkelberg." They were the conversational ornaments of our home.

"As Mr. Horace Dunkelberg said," or, as I said to Mr. Horace Dunkelberg, "were phrases calculated to establish our social standing."

As for the other people, I supposed them to be of the same class as Jones, Lincolns, Humphries and Dunkelbergs, but mostly by Dunkelbergs. These latter were very rich people who lived in Canton village.

buy a new clock for the dining-room down stairs, too—a clock with no such asthmatic strike as the present one possessed. All his personal belongings—every one of them gifts—he found room for in his pockets. Angy had even less than he. Yet they had come practically with nothing—and compared with that nothing, what they carried now seemed much. Angy heaved over the pillow-shams. Did they belong to them or to the new couple to come? Abe gazed at the shams too. They had been given to him and Angy last Christmas by all the sisters. They were white muslin with white cambric frills, and in their centers was embroidered in turkey-red cotton, "Mother," on one pillow, "Father," on the other. Every sister in the Home had taken at least one stitch in the names.

Father and Mother—not Angy and Abe! Why Father and Mother? A year ago no one could have foreseen the fortune, nor have prophesied the possession of the room by another elderly couple.

Angy drew near to the door and Abe to Angy. They looked arms and stood looking at the pillows. He saw, and she saw, the going back to the old bedroom in the old home across the woods and over the field—the going back. And in sharp contrast they each recalled the first time that they had stepped beneath that roof nearly half a century ago—the first home-coming—when her mother-heart and his father-heart had been filled with the hope of children—children to bless their marriage, children to complete their home, children to love, children to feed them with love in return.

"Let's adopt some little folks," said Angy, half in a whisper. "I'm afraid the old place'll seem lonesome without—"

"Really?" exclaimed the woman in surprise. "And does it take all those people to make the boat go straight?"

Mrs. Smith was on her first ocean voyage.

"What's that down there?" she asked the captain.

"That's the steerage, madame," he replied.

"Really?" exclaimed the woman in surprise. "And does it take all those people to make the boat go straight?"

"Ter take my place!" he glanced about the hall defiantly. Who dared to enter there and take his place?—his place!

"This is a old ladies' home," he protested. "What right you got a-takin' in a good-fer-nuthin' old man? Mebbe he'd rob yew or kill yew! When men git ter rampagin', yew can't tell what they might dew."

Sarah Jane nodded her head knowingly, as if to exclaim:

"I told yer so!"

But Miss Abigail hurriedly explained that it was a man and wife that they wanted. She blushed as she added that of course they would not take a man without his wife.

"No, indeed! That'd be highly improper," smirked Ruby Lee.

Then Abe went stamping to the stairway, saying suddenly:

"All right, I'll give yew all the money yew want fer advertisin', an' yew kin say he'll be clothin' an' dressed proper, tew, an' supplied with terbaccer an' readin' matter besides; but jest wait till the directors read that advertisement!" They had me here sorter perendin' ter be unbeknownst. Come on, Angy. Let's go upstairs an' git our things. Let's—"

Aunt Nancy half arose from her chair, resting her two shaking hands on the arms of—

"Brother Abe," she called quaveringly after the couple. "I guess yew kin afford ter fix up any objections o' the directors?"

Angy pressed her husband's arm as she joined him in the upper hall.

"Don't you see, Abe. They don't realize that that poor old gentleman, whoever he may be, won't be yew. They jest know that yew was yew; an' they want ter git another jest as near like yew as they kin."

Abe grunted, yet nevertheless went half-way down stairs again to call more graciously to the sisters that he would give them a reference any time for knowing how to treat a man just right.

"That feller 'll be lucky, gals," he added in tremulous tones. "I hope he'll appreciate yew as I allers dew."

Then Abe went to join Angy in the room which the sisters had given to him that bitter day when the cry of his heart had been very like unto:

"Eloi, Eloi, lama sabachthani!"

After all, what was there of his and Angy's here? Their garments they did not need now. They would leave them behind for the other old couple that was to come. There was nothing else but some simple gifts. He took up a pair of red wristlets that Mrs. Homan had knit, and tucked them in his new overcoat pocket. He also took Abigail's bottle of "Jockey Club" which he had despoiled some a few days ago, and tucked that in his watch pocket. When he bought himself a watch, he would buy a new clock for the dining-room down stairs, too—a clock with no such asthmatic strike as the present one possessed. All his personal belongings—every one of them gifts—he found room for in his pockets. Angy had even less than he. Yet they had come practically with nothing—and compared with that nothing, what they carried now seemed much. Angy heaved over the pillow-shams. Did they belong to them or to the new couple to come? Abe gazed at the shams too. They had been given to him and Angy last Christmas by all the sisters. They were white muslin with white cambric frills, and in their centers was embroidered in turkey-red cotton, "Mother," on one pillow, "Father," on the other. Every sister in the Home had taken at least one stitch in the names.

Father and Mother—not Angy and Abe! Why Father and Mother? A year ago no one could have foreseen the fortune, nor have prophesied the possession of the room by another elderly couple.

Angy drew near to the door and Abe to Angy. They looked arms and stood looking at the pillows. He saw, and she saw, the going back to the old bedroom in the old home across the woods and over the field—the going back. And in sharp contrast they each recalled the first time that they had stepped beneath that roof nearly half a century ago—the first home-coming—when her mother-heart and his father-heart had been filled with the hope of children—children to bless their marriage, children to complete their home, children to love, children to feed them with love in return.

"Let's adopt some little folks," said Angy, half in a whisper. "I'm afraid the old place'll seem lonesome without—"

"Really?" exclaimed the woman in surprise. "And does it take all those people to make the boat go straight?"

Mrs. Smith was on her first ocean voyage.

"What's that down there?" she asked the captain.

"That's the steerage, madame," he replied.

"Really?" exclaimed the woman in surprise. "And does it take all those people to make the boat go straight?"

protest, to go to meeting. "Ayes! you've got 'em on ag'in," said Aunt Deel. "I suppose your black rousers ain't good 'nough. That's 'cause you know Edna Perry is goin' to be there—ayes!"

Edna Perry was a widow of about his age who was visiting her sister in the neighborhood.

Aunt Deel wouldn't go to church with us, so we went off together and walked home with Mrs. Perry. As we passed our house I saw Aunt Deel looking out of the window and waved my hand to her.

When we got home at last we found my aunt sitting in her arm-chair by the stove.

"You did it—didn't ye?—ayes," she demanded rather angrily as we came in.

"Done what?" asked Uncle Peabody.

"Shinin' up to that Perry woman—ain't ye?"—ayes! "I see you're bound to get married—ayes!"

I had no idea what it meant to get married but I made up my mind that it was something pretty low and bad. The moment I blamed Uncle Peabody.

Aunt Deel's voice and manner seemed to indicate that she had borne with him to the limit of her patience.

"Well," said my uncle, "I wouldn't be so—"

Again he checked himself for fear of going too far, I suppose.

"My heart's my heart," Aunt Deel exclaimed and struggled to her feet sobbing, and Uncle Peabody helped her to the lounge. She was so ill the rest of the day that my uncle had to go for the doctor while I bathed her forehead with cold water.

Poor Uncle Peabody! Every step toward matrimony required such an outlay of emotion and such a sacrifice of comfort that I presume it seemed to be hardly worth while.

Yet I must be careful not to give the reader a false impression of my Aunt Deel. She was a thin, pale woman, rather tall, with brown hair and blue eyes and a tongue—well, her tongue has spoken for itself. I suppose that she will seem inhumanly selfish with this jealousy of her brother.

I promised her that I would look after you and I'm agoin' to do it—ayes!" I used to hear her say to my uncle.

There were not many married men who were so thoroughly looked after. This was due in part to her high opinion of the Baynes family, and to a general distrust of women. In her view they were a designing lot. It was probably true that Mrs. Perry was fond of show and would have been glad to join the Baynes family, but those little things should have been set down against her. There was Aunt Deel's mistake. She couldn't allow any humanity in other women.

She toiled incessantly. She washed and scrubbed and polished and dusted and sewed and knit from morning until night. She lived in mortal fear that company would come and find her unprepared. Anna Jones or Jabez Lincoln and his wife or Ben and Mary Humphries, or Mr. and Mrs. Horace Dunkelberg. Those were the people of whom she talked when the neighbors came in and when she was talking of the Bayneses. I observed that she always said "Mr. and Mrs. Horace Dunkelberg." They were the conversational ornaments of our home.

"As Mr. Horace Dunkelberg said," or, as I said to Mr. Horace Dunkelberg, "were phrases calculated to establish our social standing."

As for the other people, I supposed them to be of the same class as Jones, Lincolns, Humphries and Dunkelbergs, but mostly by Dunkelbergs. These latter were very rich people who lived in Canton village.

Jealousy is said to have prompted the killing.

"Might better adopt the sisters," he spoke almost gruffly. "I allers dew think yew 'uns would be the most comfort tew yew after they growed up."

"A baby is dretful cunnin'," Angy persisted. "But," she added sadly, "I don't suppose a teethin' mite would find much in common with us."

"Anyway," vowed Abe, suddenly beginning to unfasten the pillow-shams, "these belong ter us, an' I'm agoin' ter take 'em."

They went down stairs silently, the shams wrapped in a newspaper carried under his arm.

"Waal, naow," he tried to speak cheerfully as they rejoined the others, and he pushed his way toward the dining-room—"I'll go an' git my cup an' saucer."

But Miss Abigail blocked the door, again blushing, again confused.

"That 'Tew-our-Beloved-Brother cup," she said gently, her eyes not meeting the wound in his, "we 'bout concluded yew'd better leave here yew fer the one what answers the ad. Yew got so much naow, an' him—"

She did not finish. She could not. She felt rather than saw the blazing of Abe's old eyes. Then the fire beneath his brows died out and a mist obscured his sight.

"Gals," he asked humbly, "would yew rather have a new 'beloved brother'?"

For a space there was no answer. Aunt Nancy's head was bowed in her hands. Lazy Daisy was openly sobbing. Miss Ellie was twisting her fingers nervously in and out—she understood them to clutch at Angy's arm as if to hold her. At last Miss Abigail spoke with so unaccustomed a sharpness that her voice seemed not her own:

"Sech a foolleh question as that no body in their sound senses would ask."

Abe sat down in his old place at the fireside and smiled a thousand smiles in one. He smiled and rubbed his hands before the blaze. The blaze itself seemed scarcely more bright and warm than the light from within which transfigured his aged face.

"Gals," he chuckled in his old familiar way, "I dunno how Sam'l Darby 'll take it; but if mother's willin', I guess I won't buy back no more of the old place, 'cept'n' jest my rockin'-chair with the red roses onto it, an' all the rest o' this here plagued money I'll hand over ter the directors, an' stay right here an' take my comfort."

"Fshaw, mother," he protested; "yew fertit I was adopted then, naow I be adoptin'. That's a big difference."

She lifted her face, relieved, and smiled into the relieved and radiant

Don't Let Catarrh Drag You into Consumption

Avoid Its Dangerous Stage.

There is a more serious stage of Catarrh than the annoying stage caused by the stoppage of passages, and the hawking and spitting and other distasteful features.

The real danger comes from the tendency of the disease to continue its course downward until the lungs become affected, and then dreaded consumption is on your path. Your own experience has taught you that the disease cannot be cured by sprays, inhalers, atomizers, jellies and other local applications. S. S. S. has proven a most satisfactory remedy for Catarrh because it goes direct to its source, and removes the germs of the disease from the blood. Your Graduation Picture

Be sure to have your picture taken at this important occasion. There's nothing so cherished by those who love you as your photograph. Remember your photo is something your friends cannot buy. Fathers and Mothers—ask a graduation gift, why choose some meaningless trinket when HIS or HER picture will give so much more pleasure to all members of the family? OUR PHOTOGRAPHS HAVE LIFE TO THEM.
